Splatt Theatre Company makes presents their adaptation of a timeless travelling tale Medusa.

In the land of the Hyperborean, held hostage within her own body, she waits. Instead of teeth she has sharp tusks, her hands are made of bronze, she has dragon wings on her back and her eyes are red and on her head instead of hair, grow snakes with hissing tongues and gleaming eyes. She is feared by all and yet all she longs for is to be set free.

And just as fate should have it, there lives a tyrannical, greedy King named Polydectes. He longs to make the beautiful Princess Danae his wife, but one thing stands in his way, Danae's son Perseus.

Desperate to remove Perseus from the picture, King Polydectes sets him the impossible task to bring back the head of the Gorgon Medusa.

Will King Polydectes make Danae his wife? Will Perseus succeed in his mission? Will Medusa be set free?

And will there be a wedding on the day?

What the children have said:

"The scene I enjoyed the most was the part where the nasty King Polydectes opened his engagement present and got the SHOCK of his entire lifetime! Ha Ha, we'll never see him again!" Faith

"I like the way you got the audience involved. I think it was really funny and exciting when Perseus met the grey ones!"

Harry

What the teachers have said:

"The kids had a fantastic time and wouldn't stop talking about it all the way back to school and for the hour or so we had left at the end of the day! Introducing their topic in this way really helps to focus their learning and provides such enthusiasm for it going forward that my job becomes 100% easier!"

"We really enjoyed the performance and I know that the children gained so much from the experience"
